Border-Making and its Consequences: Interpreting Evidence from the "Post-Colonial" and "Post-Imperial" 20th Century
We want to thank our sponsors and partners, who helped us to make the Association for Borderlands Studies 2nd World Conference (ABS World 2018) possible.
Introduction

After the success of the ABS 1st World Conference in 2014, The Association for Borderlands Studies is most pleased to announce the second event in this truly international conference series. The ABS World 2nd Conference is organised by the Faculty of Historical and Cultural Studies at the University of Vienna and hosted in Vienna and Budapest, 10th to 14th July 2018. The organising theme for this Conference is:

Border-Making and its Consequences – Interpreting Evidence from the “Post-Colonial” and “Post-Imperial” 20th Century

Borders and borderlands are again at the centre of debate regarding global political, socio-cultural, economic and environmental tensions and conflicts – they also potentially offer spaces of negotiation and dialogue for their resolution. Global history, however, testifies to the fact that borderlands have frequently been a target of mistrust, precisely because they have been perceived as threatening – as ambiguous spaces of identity, allegiance, and historical memory. Attempts to eradicate borderlands have taken place through armed conflict, the ideological creation of the Cold War and other confrontational borders, the dismemberment of states, territorial shifts and, most drastically, ethnic cleansing.

The post-imperial experience of Europe, for example, raises numerous questions that relate to borders, identities and citizenship and, ultimately, migration. The dissolution of multinational empires such as the Austro-Hungarian and the Ottoman in the early 20th century, as well as the creation of new states and/or borders in Western Europe, such as Ireland, which inspired other subjects of colonial empires, were momentous historical events with far-reaching consequences far beyond Europe. However, one of the lessons that emerged from this experience is that nationalism that insist on singular identities and cultural homogeneity are permanent sources of conflict. Whereas borders and the creation of new nation-states were considered a solution to war after the First World War, subsequent events and the disaster of the Second World War have proved otherwise.

On the other hand, visions of a borderless world and post-Cold War “de-bordering” after the collapse of the Soviet Union and Yugoslavia were also short-lived, a fact evidenced by the strong militarisation of many borders worldwide and the emerging of a border industrial complex in Europe, North America, the Middle East and elsewhere. Borders and borderlands are therefore also central to understanding the consequences of security policies and the control of mobility at the national, regional, and global levels: in terms of perceived understandings of security, borders represent an interface between domestic concerns and wider interstate and intercultural contexts. At the most basic, borders serve to protect national societies from external threats, real or imagined, while maintaining conditions for their economic sustainability. Beyond this, however, the functions and social significance of borders not only reflect the means in which security risks and challenges can be articulated and acted upon but also ethical questions of considerable importance.

Globally, conflicts over borders and territories are quite common in the post-colonial world, where bordering was a result of colonial policies ignoring historical and socio-political contexts. Still, borders are regarded as marks of national identity by state elites even in the post-colonial world, and any dilution of this is strongly resisted, resulting in increasingly securitised borders also in the post-colonial world.

At this conference, attention is centered on the historical and contemporary dynamics of border creation, border management and border shifting, as well as the consequences of these practices for the societies concerned. Borders delineate space, which both creates and reproduces order. We seek to gain deeper insight into the similarities and differences in the way borders are made around the world, as well as the forms and functions borders fulfill throughout time. We will also explore ethical questions that emerge from border politics and border-making. On a more visionary note, ABS 2nd World Conference will consider borders and borderlands as spaces of encounter and plurality. Indeed, the possibility of pluralism, not as a collection of separate cultural realms as some would envision, but as a context where shared commitments, and not necessarily shared values, could allow for more inclusive understandings of community and more accommodating attitudes to multiculturalism and migration.

Words of Welcome Philipp Ther

2018 is a year where all over the world new borders are being erected or fortified. This has to do with the perceived threat from economic globalisation, global migration and mass flight, the instability of existing states, and the aggression of neighbouring states. Very often these borders are put up with open or hidden references to the past, and nationalist and other fundamentalist imaginations. Because history is so often misused to legitimise the construction of physical borders and mental boundaries, the organisers of this convention have chosen to put a strong focus on history, which does of course not mean that other disciplines are marginalised. The ABS conferences always drew their strength from their multi- and interdisciplinarity. Hence, the organisers and the academic board are proud to host more than a dozen disciplines and colleagues from more than four dozen countries.

The caesura of 1918 is a very obvious one for the two cities where this conference takes place, Vienna and Budapest. One hundred years ago the Austro-Hungarian Empire fell apart, to be succeeded by six nation states, some of which were de facto empires on a smaller scale. The ramifications of this nation-state formation went beyond Central Europe. It inspired the uprising and nation-building in Ireland and at the other end of Europe, in Turkey, which averted the fate of colonisation. This had strong reverberations in the British, French and other colonies. The independence movements are mentioned here because they point to a tension in the study of nation-state formation, which was the single most important factor for the formation of “hard” state borders. While hardly any serious scholars question the legitimacy of these independence or decolonisation movements, the formation of so many new borders clearly had negative consequences and led to the rise of new and even more radical nationalism.

This is again very visible in the larger region hosting you. In the years after 1989, the number of nation-states in the former Habsburg lands doubled. Yet the horrors of the war in former Yugoslavia reinforced a consensus among the European elites that hard, lethal borders like the Berlin Wall should be overcome. The enlarging European Union ushered in a unique experiment in removing territorial borders through the Schengen agreements. Moreover, it took down economic borders and introduced a common currency. In many ways, European integration resembled a radical globalisation on a smaller scale, where not just capital, but also people could move more freely than ever before. This “ever” includes the often idealised empires where social divides and the police limited the freedom of establishment to a small elite.

Maybe the achievements of the European Union were also too socially limited. That has made it easy for old and new nationalists to polemice against open territorial boundaries and European and other transnational integration. The resurrection of boundaries is but one element in a quite conclusive worldview which is centred on securities against foreign trade, foreign labor competition, immigration, crime and in favour of essentialised national identities. Academics should be more aware of their heightened status, though the salaries and often precarious work contracts do not usually permit an elite lifestyle. The popular resistance against European integration and globalisation show that social boundaries and borders separating nations, social groups and sometimes older and younger colleagues in our field might have been underestimated. Was the lack of social awareness also a result of the cultural turn and the predilection for cultural issues? Though I view some developments in my own field critically, it would be wrong to give an easy generalising answer. None of the multiple disciplines present at this convention should or could turn back to the age before the multiple turns. Nevertheless, the significance and the meaning of borders and boundaries can only be gauged when they are set in the life-worlds of people who might not have the opportunity to travel a lot, and who cross borders out of poverty and not because they may attend a conference. I hope very much that having in mind the tensions between borders and boundaries, between social experiences and cultural constructions and between the global macro and the local micro levels of analysis will provoke lively discussions and result in a fruitful convention.

Words of Welcome Machteld Venken

It is my pleasure to welcome you to the Association for Borderland Studies 2nd World Conference in Vienna and Budapest. Since I won the open global competition to organise this conference almost two years ago, my team and I have been engaged in composing an attractive programme in line with the conference’s theme “Border-Making and Its Consequences: Evidence from the ‘Post-Colonial’ and ‘Post-Imperial’ 20th Century”.

I have been using my position as a Conference Chair to experiment with shifting borders in academia along the applied dimension of border research. As Henk van Houwelingen wrote: “(...) a border is not and can never be an answer. It is a question. The imperative geo-philosophical border question of our time is how and why we create a just border for ourselves and thereby for others” (2001, 60).

We repeat the successful format of the Association for Borderland Studies 1st World Conference in 2014, which took place in Joensuu and Saint Petersburg. On the occasion of the 100th anniversary of the dissolution of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, the first part of this conference is organised at the University of Vienna and its second part at the Central European University in Budapest. In between, conference participants have the opportunity to take part in one of the cross-border excursions.

In an aim to partly overcome the financial and visa borders preventing scholars from joining us at this conference, we compose a Global Track of nine sessions offering an overview of Border Studies, film these sessions and make them available on the internet. In addition, you are welcome to attend the Habsburg Track, where border-making processes and their consequences within one of the twelve nation-states currently incorporating parts of the lands that used to belong to the Austrian-Hungarian Empire are discussed.

A third initiative tackles borders of expertise. On Tuesday afternoon, the conference venue is transformed into a platform for a citizen science experiment, where one hundred citizens will have face-to-face dialogues about the meaning of borders with border scholars. The citizen science project will later continue in a digital café, where participants are to engage in a global collective search for the meaning of borders.

We also decided to schedule five keynote speakers who have never given a keynote speech before. Featuring four women and one man, the keynote speakers' list reverses the gender disparity of the Association for Borderlands Studies 1st World Conference, which featured four men and one woman.

The purpose of the last initiative is to make participants reflect on scientific conferences as bordering practices within academia. The opening keynote speaker David J. Nicholson will share his viewpoint of academic conferences as neoliberal commodities with you. In addition, you will be asked to evaluate this conference’s attempts to overturn existing borders within academia.

Thank you for coming to ABS World 2018. We are glad to have you here.

Machteld Venken
Conference Chair

Words of Welcome Francisco Lara-Valencia

The ABS World Conference is an international event that happens every four years and brings together the largest number of scholars, policy makers, practitioners, and other border experts in the world.

In 2018, the 2nd ABS World Conference is taking place in beautiful Vienna and Budapest on July 10–14. Under the able leadership of the University of Vienna, the local organising committee (chaired by Dr. Machteld Venken) has developed an exciting interdisciplinary and truly international programme centered on the topic of border-making and its consequences. The organising topic of the conference cannot be more timely and relevant given the resurgence of borders as the incarnation of the dilemmas faced by modern liberal democracies amidst the revival of nationalisms and a widespread scepticism of globalisation.

This year, the conference in Vienna and Budapest will convene more than 400 participants and keynote speakers that will feed our academic curiosity with cutting-edge research and theoretical reflections. The continued growth of the ABS World Conference is an indication of its high quality and impact. I am confident that the conference will be an excellent venue for the exchange of information and ideas that will expand the field of border studies, as well as serving as the breeding ground for exciting collaborative projects across disciplinary and national borders.

With this belief, I welcome all participants to the ABS 2nd World Conference. I look forward to meeting you personally and hope you will find this meeting stimulating and rewarding.

Association for Borderlands Studies

The Association for Borderlands Studies (ABS) is an international nonprofit academic organization founded in 1976. For more than 40 years the ABS has contributed to the advancement of border theory and the comparative understanding of societal dynamics produced by borders and bordering processes worldwide. Its members from nearly 55 countries share interdisciplinary interests in the theory, methods, and policy-translation of border studies, which they develop through the ABS Annual Meeting, the ABS World Conference, the Journal of Borderlands Studies, and the work of its regional chapters.

Currently, the ABS membership encompasses researchers, educators, experts, and other professionals working in higher education institutions, research centers, international organisations, citizen associations, and governments in the Americas, Europe, Asia, and Africa.

As the leading international society of border scholars, the ABS fosters the discussion and critical examination of the latest knowledge about border themes and issues worldwide.

Membership

It is an exciting time to join the ABS. Interest in our field of work is growing, and the need for knowledge and expertise on borders and transborder processes and communities is increasing in universities, government, community organizations, multilateral institutions, and the private sector.

When you join the ABS, you become part of an active community of border scholars and practitioners. As a member, you can:

- Meet and be part of an international network of border scholars, educators, and practitioners;
- Learn about the latest approaches, methods, and techniques used in disciplinary, multidisciplinary, and applied border studies;
- Develop your professional skills and advance your career as researcher, educator, or expert on border issues;
- Access past issues and the most current issue of the Journal of Borderlands Studies, published by the ABS four times a year;
- Get updates about upcoming conferences, workshops, publications, and other events through La Frontera, the ABS official newsletter;
- Participate in the ABS Annual Conference and the ABS World Conference.

In addition, all regular members can nominate candidates and vote for officers, hold offices, and participate in meetings, programmes, and other activities and services of the ABS and its regional sections in Europe, Asia, and Latin America.

Participants will have the opportunity to join ABS at the conference venue.

Journal of Borderlands Studies

The primary publication of the Association for Borderlands Studies is the Journal of Borderlands Studies, published four times a year.

It has, for more than a decade, distinguished itself as a leading forum for borderlands research. Widely consulted by educators, practitioners, and researchers, the journal encourages the submission of articles from disciplines across the humanities and social sciences as well as from allied fields. All published manuscripts are peer-reviewed. Since 2011, the Association for Borderlands Studies’s Journal is published in the UK by Routledge Journals, Taylor & Francis Group, Informa UK Limited.

The current Co-Editors in Chief are Dr. Christophe Sohn and Dr. Sergio Peña.

Plenary Session
Migration, Trafficking and Borders: Contemporary Global Challenges

Organiser: Machteld Venken
Chair: Philipp Ther

The plenary session will gather specialists from international organisations in Vienna.
- Fabrizio Sarrica (United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, Research Officer Global Report on Human Trafficking in Persons Unit)
- Richard Eames (International Anti-Corruption Academy, Senior Coordinator for Advocacy and Communications)
- Jarosław Pietrusiewicz (International Anti-Corruption Academy, Senior Officer for External Relations and Protocol)
- Marian Benbow Pfisterer (International Organization for Migration, Head of Office)
- Alberto Andreani (Organization for Co-operation and Security in Europe, Programme and Capacity Building Officer)
- Bernhard Perchinig (International Centre for Migration Policy Development, Senior Researcher)

Keynote Speeches

The 2018 ABS World Conference Border-Making and its Consequences - Interpreting Evidence from the “Post-Colonial” and “Post-Imperial” 20th Century offers the opportunity to five scholars to hold their first keynote speech. In addition, the conference continues the initiative of one of its partners, the Central European University, to invite women to talk.
Donald J. Nicolson: Conferences within Borders; Borders within Conferences
July 10th, 6:45 pm, lecture hall 10

Academic conferences are commodities that reflect the insidious spread of neoliberalism across the academy. They do so, among other ways, by being a marketplace for tools, methods and ideas to be traded. However, academic conferences had escaped the empirical gaze until relatively recently; and so, there is much still to understand. Travel is a barrier to attendance and knowledge sharing; and border security has for some become as important a hurdle to clear as getting their conference abstract accepted. This represents the problem of "Conferences within Borders".

A subtler but greater threat is that of "Borders within Conferences". This reflects the hierarchical academy, as played out at conferences. Based on this taxonomy, borders exist between different conferences, different paradigms, and different professional groups. In my field of work, Health Services Research, there are borders of expertise between patients and healthcare professionals, and these too are evident at conferences.

These are serious problems and they are not going to be resolved any time soon because of the dominance of neoliberalism in the academy. I have voiced concerns about research being a literature and suggested that conferences are a marketplace for knowledge, where research stories are told and sold for their commodity value. Therefore do not think it controversial to suggest empirical work is on a par with other writings, when one of Vienna’s finest, Ludwig Wittgenstein, favoured Tolstoy over classical philosophy. Like him, we have to work out how we will show the [conference/research] fly the way out of the [academic] fly-bottle.

Donald Nicolson’s speech will be introduced by Laurie Trautman.

Irina Marin: New Frontiers, New Realities? The Case of the Banat of Temesvár
July 11th, 1:30 pm, lecture hall 10

Starting from the case study of the historical Habsburg province of the Banat of Temesvár, currently divided between Romania, Serbia and Hungary, this presentation aims to explore the creative and destructive potential of imperial and national borders, their paradoxical quality of being out of step with the people they enclose, and the persistence of mental and cultural frontiers long after the physical frontiers have shifted. The Banat of Temesvár was born out of a war of imperial conquest and disintegrated as a consequence of the First World War. It saw several waves of colonisation and brought together numerous ethnicities and religious denominations, forging a distinct regional identity over 200 years of imperial rule. The Banat was a typical Habsburg borderland and in its early days functioned as laboratory of imperial policies. Its change of hands from Habsburg to Hungarian authorities at the end of the 18th century did not obliterate its imperial legacy nor did the disintegration of the Empire more than a century later. The evolution of the individual splinters of the province post-First World War is one of the most fascinating aspects in the history of the province. A comparison between these fragments of the province reveals how border re-drawing can make the difference between life and death, prosperity and misery. This presentation will therefore examine how the new borders changed what was essentially the same polity and how subsequent political regimes were grafted onto the region’s imperial legacy and transformed peoples’ lives in radical ways.

Irina Marin’s speech will be introduced by Philipp Ther.

Irina Marin is currently Visiting Professor at the University of Augsburg, Germany. She holds a PhD in History from University College London and has taught and researched at SSEES/UCL, Oxford University, University of Leicester and the Vienna Wissenschaftliche Institute für Holocaust Studies. She has recently finished working on a project about the circulation of news, rumour and violence across the triple frontier between Tsarist Russia, Romania and Austria-Hungary at the beginning of the 20th century, which has formed the basis of her second book Peaceful Violence and Antisemitism in Early Twentieth-Century Eastern Europe, to be published by Palgrave-Macmillan. Her first book Confronting Frontiers in the Balkans: Ottoman and Habsburg Realities in Eastern Europe was published by I.B. Tauris and is a historical monograph of the Banat of Temesvár.
In summer 2014, thousands of Central American children—sometimes alone and sometimes with their mothers and parents—made their way across multiple borders to reach the United States. Mainstream media coverage of the dramatic increase of these “unaccompanied minors,” revealing images of inhumane conditions in which hundreds were being detained at the border. Public discourse, as evident in politicians’ speeches and journalists’ headlines, suggested that migrants—including refugees and asylum seekers—constituted a “crisis” in the United States. My talk will analyse President Barack Obama and his Administration’s construction of Central American migration as a crisis. Based on a close reading of letters to Congress, governmental Fact Sheets, speeches, and other written documents of the administration, I argue that the language that initially established violence against migrants as the crux of the crisis, simultaneously erased the role of the United States in supporting the conditions that are expelling migrants from their homelands. It is precisely the militarisation of borders, both by the United States and with its support also by Mexico, that migrants are made especially vulnerable during their arduous journeys. The faulty logic during a purported moment of crisis made it possible to propose what are arguably forms of extension of the border, via family detention centers and ramped up enforcement, as the main solutions. Central American refugees, therefore, are left with only their bodies to resist. They rely on their bodies when they cross international borders and later when they enact hunger strikes from within detention, to draw attention to the true crises: U.S. intervention and nation-states’ long-term unwillingness to enforce human rights protections in the region.

Leisy Abrego’s speech will be introduced by Emmanuel Brunet-Jailly.

Leisy J. Abrego is Associate Professor in Chicana/o Studies at UCLA. She is a member of the first large wave of Salvadoran immigrants who arrived in Los Angeles in the early 1980s. Her research and teaching interests—inspired in great part by her family’s experiences—are in Central American migrations, Latina/o families, the inequalities created by gender, and the production of “illegality” through U.S. immigration laws. She is the author of the award-winning book, Sacrificing Famílias: Navigating Laws, Labor, and Love Across Borders (Stanford University Press, 2014), and co-authored with Cecilia Munjaí and Leah Schmelzle: Immigrant Families (Polity Press, 2016). Currently, she examines the day-to-day lives of mixed status families after Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA).

Resource scarcity and increasingly prevalent disasters that cannot be contained within jurisdictional boundaries are bringing the territorial ambitions of nation-states into growing tension with conservation agendas. As the intersecting megatrends of urbanisation, climate change and neoliberal globalisation are depleting planetary resources and incubating crises at a rate that is outpacing our combined capacities to adapt to a changing biosphere, environmental governance is being recast as a problem that requires transnational solidarity and global action. The inability of national governance regimes around the world to deal with regional instability arising from environmental conflict and human displacement is ushering in new networks of non-state actors that animate around the destruction, commodification and conservation of shared resources. These alternative networked geographies of environmental governance, in reframing cross-border crises as symptoms of wider scales of socio-ecological transformations, are rendering the border fluid, flexible, and less significant.

This presentation is framed around “transboundary communities of commoning” to describe the emerging networked geographies of environmental governance that are reconstituting social and material constructions of the border. I will consider how shifting discourses about the (geo)political terrain of environmental governance are being leveraged by diverse actors to situate gendered, class, indigenous, eco-religious/spiritual, urban and rural poor claims to the ecological commons within broader sustainable development agendas and cooperative conservation platforms. These transboundary environmental networks are breaking down borders that produce and perpetuate differential cognitive understandings of issues such as socio-ecological justice and equity of access to, and ownership of, common pool resources. Consideration of these transboundary communities of commoning across organisational levels, ranging from grassroots and neighbourhood associations through to the city, country and regional/international levels, can lend insights into the limits of, and prospects for, alternative participatory pathways to transboundary environmental governance.

Michelle Miller’s speech will be introduced by David Newman.
Michelle Miller’s research interests broadly focus on intersections between urban and regional governance in the context of human conflict and environmental change. These have developed through her sustained professional and personal engagement with environmental and political transformation in the Southeast Asian region. She has conducted field-based research on issues of decentralisation, conflict resolution, environmental disaster governance, urban change and citizenship and belonging in Indonesia since 1999. She is a Permanent Resident of Singapore, where her children were born. Dr. Miller is currently a Senior Research Fellow at the Asia Research Institute, National University of Singapore. Before joining AIRS, she taught at Deakin University and Charles Darwin University in Australia. She has held visiting research fellowships in Indonesia at both the Centre for Strategic and International Studies (Jakarta) and An-Namry Institute Pasama Islam Negara (Banda Aceh), which afforded institutional support while she wrote her monograph, Rebellion and Reform in Indonesia: Jakarta’s Security and Autonomy Policies in Aceh (Routledge, 2010). The process of co-editing her most recent book, Crossing Borders: Governing Environmental Disasters in a Global Urban Age in Asia and the Pacific (Springer, 2013), helps her to think through the theoretical dimensions of her emerging research on transboundary environmental governance, which is supported by a Singapore government Social Sciences Research Council grant, led by David Taylor and Jonathan Rigg (MOE2016-55RTG-068).

Machteld Venken: What is a Borderland Child?
July 16th, 12:35 pm, Auditorium A & B

After the end of the First World War, decision-makers in Paris adhered indiscriminately to the vaguely defined principle of self-determination while mapping peace onto the continent of Europe. But instead of fixing the world, they thrust their problems onto European borderlands. Borderlands in Europe became the places where the political geography of interwar Europe experienced its deepest challenges, and are therefore a window to a new understanding of 20th century history. With state involvement in children’s lives on the rise in what has been called “the Century of the Child”, borderland children were called upon to play a crucial role in the stabilisation of interwar order.

I argue in this keynote lecture that the children in the Polish-German borderlands and in the Belgian-German borderlands which switched state sovereignty following the Treaty of Versailles held much in common. A comparative contextualised reconstruction of the underlying power relations in which borderland children and their caregivers articulated their approval, negotiation or refusal of degrees of national loyalty, enables me, for example, to illustrate how the change from a politico-geographical entity to a socially lived and networked space occurred along the principle of what the Swiss geographer Claude Raffestin has called human territorialisaton. These and other examples serve to demonstrate that borderland children faced more rules than children growing up elsewhere in the country, but also, that these rules were often more negotiable.

Machteld Venken’s speech will be introduced by Jussi Laine.

Machteld Venken is an Assistant Professor and Senior Postdoctoral Researcher (Elise Richter Fellow) at the University of Vienna, where she habilitated in May 2018. She holds degrees in Slavic Studies and History from the Catholic University in Leuven (KU Leuven), and Cracow (Jagiellonian University). She is the author of Straddling the Iron Curtain: Immigrants, Immigrant Organisations, War Memories (2011), and editor of Growing Up in the Shadow of the Second World War: European Perspectives (European Review of History 2015, together with Maren Röger) and Borderland Studies Meets Child Studies. A European Encounter (2017).
Receptions and Awards

Reception at the Polish Embassy
Tuesday 10th, 7:00 pm (A-1130 Vienna, Neuerjing_Projectstrasse 42C)

Citizen Scientists are invited to the Polish Embassy of Vienna to attend a reception.

City Hall Reception in Vienna
Wednesday 11th, 7:00 pm, City Hall of Vienna

The City Hall is one of the most splendid of the numerous monumental buildings along Vienna’s Ringstrasse. On the evening of the 11th of July, we will have the opportunity to network in the midst of this unique atmosphere. Please do not forget to bring your conference badge.

Please find the directions on the map on p. 108.

University of Vienna – Student Support

The two best abstracts submitted by students will be selected by a committee, headed by Matthias Kaltenbrunner and consisting of students of the University of Vienna and Central European University. Each grant consists of 500 Euros. The prices will be awarded during the reception in the City Hall on the evening of the 11th.

ABS Reception and Recognition Ceremony
Friday 13th, 7:30 pm, at the CEU Rezidents Colón (H-1108 Budapest, Károly ut 87)

All conference delegates are warmly invited to attend the ABS reception on Friday 13th in Budapest. The reception is a fabulous opportunity to relax, connect with old friends and colleagues, as well as meet new people as the programme reaches its end. During the reception we will honour the recipients of the ABS Student Awards, greet newly appointed ABS officers, and get to know the new editors of the Journal of Borderland Studies. We look forward to seeing many of you there!

Please find directions on p. 112

Association for Borderlands Studies – Student Awards

The papers eligible for financial support have been selected by a committee consisting of Laurie Trautman, Dhananjay Tripathi and Chiara Brambilla. This funding is provided by the Association for Borderlands Studies in order to foster participation of graduate students and to ensure that contributions from all around the world will have the possibility to be represented at this event of global scale.

- Nossem, Eva (Saarland University): European Homonationalism and Italian Regionalism: Discursive Constructions of “extracomunitario”, “clandestino”, and “terrore”
- Glovsky, David (Michigan State University): “It’s all one place? Local autonomy in a colonial and post-colonial borderland
- Bissonnette, Andrée ( Université du Québec à Montréal): Caged women: Migration, mobility and access to health services in Texas and Arizona.

Excursions

All of the excursions will take place on Thursday, July 12th and include a transfer from Vienna to Budapest.

The Austro-Hungarian border

Organiser: Central European Service for Cross-Border Initiatives – Máté Jászchitz
Departure: July 12th, 8:30 am

This excursion introduces the participants to the activities of the Central European Service for Cross-Border Initiatives. It brings the participants to the city of Sopron at the Hungarian side of the Austro-Hungarian border. In addition, a visit will be paid to the Pan-European Picnic Memorial Park at the Austrian-Hungarian border where the first breakthrough of the Iron Curtain took place in 1989. The guests will be provided with a brief tour to the past and informed about the Iron Curtain, the border regime between the East and West and the events of the picnic which sent the signal of freedom to the nations of the Communist bloc.

International Corruption

Organiser: International Anti-Corruption Agency – Alexei Croitoru
Contact person: Manuel Neubauer
Departure: July 12th, 8:30 am

Participants will be made familiar with the work of two organisations: the International Anti-Corruption Academy (IACA) and the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis (IIASA). IACA has a unique dual character, as both an international organisation and a post-secondary educational institution which seeks to overcome shortcomings in knowledge and practice in the field of anticorruption and empowers professionals for the challenges of tomorrow. Its constituency comprises seventy UN Member States and three international organizations. IIASA is a scientific research institute conducting policy-oriented research into problems of a global nature that are too large or too complex to be solved by a single country or academic discipline. During a special programme hosted by IACA, participants will be made familiar with the activities of both organisations in the field of anti-corruption and border research. After a round of presentations, participants will be offered lunch and be transferred to the city centre of Budapest by bus. The estimated arrival time in Budapest is 5.30 pm.

Global Trafficking

Organiser: United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime – Fabrizio Sarria
Contact Person: Machteif Venken
Departure: July 15th, 08:00 am

This excursion will transport you from the city centre of Vienna to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime by bus. UNODC is a global leader in the fight against illicit drugs and international crime. Established in 1971 through a merger between the United Nations Drug Control Programme and the Centre for International Crime Prevention, UNODC operates in all regions of the world through an extensive network of field offices. UNODC is mandated to assist Member States in their struggle against illicit drugs, crime and terrorism. One of the three pillars of its working is research and analytical work to increase knowledge and understanding of drugs and crime issues and expand the evidence base for policy and operational decisions. During a guided tour, participants will receive more information about the organisation in general, as well as about the Global Report on Trafficking in Persons. The latest edition showed that more than six in ten of all victims have been trafficked across at least one national border. After the guided tour, participants will be offered lunch and will be transferred to the city centre of Budapest by bus. The estimated arrival time in Budapest is 5.30 pm.

Transfer Budapest–Vienna

For those who preordered it, we will provide transport from Budapest to Vienna on the 14th of July. The bus will depart at CEU at around 2:30/3:00 pm, and will arrive at the Vienna airport at 6:00/6:30 pm and in the city center of Vienna at 7:00 pm. Please note that the Local Organising Committee does not take any responsibility for possible delays caused by border controls or heavy traffic.

Top Citizen Science Experiment

Talking Borders. From Local Expertise to Global Exchange
Project Leader: Machteif Venken

Sponsored by the Austrian Science Fund, Grant Number TCS028

The Association for Borderlands Studies 2nd World Conference will become a site of scientific investigation itself, where 100 citizen scientists (bachelor students in the humanities from border regions throughout the ex-Habsburg area) will meet 100 border scholars as equals for a cross-disciplinary (border/citizen science) experiment.

This Citizen Science project asks:
1) What do borders mean to border scholars?
2) What do borders mean to young adults from the (ex-)Habsburg area?
3) What new knowledge does a global encounter between citizen scientists and border scholars reveal?

The Experiment consists of two aspects:
a) It will gather 100 face-to-face dialogues about the meaning of borders.
b) It will also host a digital café where extracts from the 100 talks will be posted so that citizen scientists and border scholars can comment on them. The online page will demonstrate how scientific knowledge on the global meaning(s) of borders is generated.

More information can be found on the project’s homepage: http://www.univie.ac.at/talkingborders/
Tracks

Border Making and its Consequences: (Ex-)Habsburg Track
Organisers: Machteld Venken in cooperation with Christoph Augustynowicz, Gábor Egy, Eva Kovács, Florian Kühner-Wiedach, Jakob Mischke, Libora Oates-Indruchova, Orlanda Obad, Alexandra Schwell, Biljana Simunović-Bešlić, Marta Verginelli and Marko Zajc

A 100 years prior to the Association for Borderlands Studies 2nd World Conference, the Austro-Hungarian Empire ceased to exist, succumbing to the continuing strains of the First World War and the growing self-confidence of its numerous peoples. In the framework of this programme, entitled the “(Ex-)Habsburg Track”, scholars working on a state or region once (wholly or partly) part of the monarchy (12 in total) discuss the process of dissolution itself, the creation of new borders in the aftermath of the First World War, the (re-)definition of borders between the successor states in the interwar period, as well as during the Second World War, the rise and fall of the Iron Curtain, and contemporary issues through a disciplinary or interdisciplinary lens.

The panels of the (Ex-)Habsburg Track will take place throughout the conference in lecture hall 11 (Vienna) and in Gellner Room (Budapest), July 10th to 13th.

Border-Making and its Consequences: Global Track
Organisers: Machteld Venken and Astrid Fellner in cooperation with Edward Boyle, Willie Eselebor, Akihiro Iwashita, Ilkka Liikanen, David Newman, Laurie Trautman, Dhananjay Tripathi, and Christian Wille

The “Global Track” aims to provide an overview over the state of the arts in border research worldwide. This programme consists of seven panels, covering Eastern Europe, Western Europe, Asia, Africa, the Middle East, North America, and South America. To enable scholars around the world, as well as the broader public, to profit from the concentrated knowledge presented at the conference, these panels will be filmed and made accessible via the internet thanks to financial support from the German Federal Agency for Civic Education (Bundeszentrale für politische Bildung).

The panels of the Global Track and the Extended Global Track will take place throughout the conference in lecture hall 10 (Vienna) and Auditorium A (Budapest).

99 Years after the Paris Peace Conference
Organisers: Machteld Venken and Steen Be Frandsen

In 1919, statesmen and diplomats gathered in France to lay out the conditions and prospects of peace. The men at the decision tables were convinced borders on the European continent needed to be replaced so as to bring Europe to order. Five international pre-First World War treaties laid down the shape of interwar Europe’s state borders in black and white. The Treaty of Versailles regulated the borders with Germany, the Treaty of St. Germain with Austria, the Treaty of Neuilly with Bulgaria, the Treaty of Trianon with Hungary and the Treaty of Sèvres with the Ottoman Empire. In some of the regions affected by the treaties, inhabitants could later vote on whether they wanted to see sovereignty shifted.

In this track, we focus on historical analyses on the border-shaping process in 1919–1923, how people lived within and beyond their new geographical borders, as well as how the switch of sovereignty was remembered.

The panels will take place in Auditorium B (Budapest), July 13th to 14th.

Borders and Boundaries in Asia
Organisers: Edward Boyle, Akihiro Iwashita, and Dhananjay Tripathi

Borders denote lines of separation, but they can also have regionally specific connotations. For a person living in Europe, border crossing can be a daily affair. By contrast, in Asia, borders primarily reflect the security anxieties of a state. This security-centred approach to borders is partly a colonial legacy, but also indicates the existence of serious political divides in Asia. Moreover, there are regionally specific issues in Asia that make Border Studies more challenging. In South Asia, the two nuclear powers of India and Pakistan remain deadlocked and refuse to bridge the partition of 1947. In Central Asia, economic imperatives are now posing questions for the utility of national borders. In East and South-East Asia, varied maritime border issues are complicating the regional security situation. In West Asia, political instability and religious fundamentalism are making borders issues intractable.

Asian borders are also complex and interesting in a number of ways. Asia is a region with abundant natural resources and immense economic potential. By improving border connectivity, commercial possibilities hold out the promise of realising the dream of an Asian century.
Asia is also a melting pot of different cultures, undefined by territorial limits, and which defy all sorts of borders and boundaries. There are sensitive questions connected to societal limits that find themselves manifested in patriarchy, class discrimination, religious fundamentalism and terrorism. There are also critical issues like migrations, refugees, and environmental degradation, the resolution to which requires cross border cooperation. The Borders and Boundaries in Asia track at the Association for Borderlands Studies 2nd World Conference provides the perfect venue at which to discuss these various aspects of Asia’s borders.

The BBA-panels will take place in lecture hall 15 (Vienna), July 10th and 11th. The last panel (11th, 5:00 pm) is scheduled for lecture hall 10.

Collaborators

UniGR-Center for Border Studies
Astrid Fellner and Christian Wille

The University of the Greater Region’s Center for Border Studies organizes seven panels on the Association for Borderlands Studies 2nd World Conference. This cross-border research network of researchers from universities in Germany, France, Belgium and Luxembourg was launched in 2014 and constitutes a multidisciplinary platform for Border Studies. The UniGR-Center for Border Studies is active in four fields: development of Border Studies in research, anchoring of Border Studies in teaching, exchange and networking with stakeholders and between the partner universities.

In the period from 2018 to 2020, the network partners are implementing the Interreg VA Greater Region project “European Center of Competence and Knowledge in Border Studies (UniGR-Center for Border Studies)”. The cross-border cooperation project aims at making research on borders in the Greater Region more visible on an international level. The total budget amounts to 3.6 million euros, of which 2 million euros are EU funding.

The UniGR-Center for Border Studies deals scientifically with life worlds in border regions and wants to support regional stakeholders with its expertise in decision-making processes. To this end, an ambitious work programme is being implemented that closely interconnects the project partners, ensures optimal research conditions, and promotes dialogue between academia and civil society.

For example, key concepts of border studies are being compiled in a trilingual glossary, and important border research documents are being bundled in three languages (DE/FR/EN) in an online database. In addition, scientific seminars and public panel discussions on borders and its challenges are being organised. The project also simplifies cross border teaching and develops modern blended learning solutions by taking the example of the tri-national Master in Border Studies (http://master.borderstudies.org) and thereby benefiting the students of the six partner universities.

About 80 researchers from the University of Luxembourg, the University of Kaiserslautern, the University of Liège, the University of Lorraine, the Saarland University and the University of Trier are involved in the project. The scientific responsibility lies with the University of Luxembourg.

Further information: www.borderstudies.org & on twitter @UniGR_CBS

The panels organised by the UniGR-CBS will take place in lecture hall 12 (Vienna). On July 11th (8:00 am) two panels are scheduled simultaneously, one in lecture hall 10, one in lecture hall 12.

Borders in Globalization
Emmanuel Brunet-Jailly

The Borders in Globalization (BIG) research programme (Social Science Research Council of Canada, 7 years / $5 million, led from the University of Victoria, Canada, with partners in 20 countries) submitted three panels. The core research of this team is to document how new borders of globalization challenge the well-established concept that borders are primarily understood as territorial boundaries that emerge out of international treaties. Indeed, the question whether the territorial frame, or ‘territorial trap’ in academic terms, adequately captures current forms of bordering processes, including territorial boundaries. In pursuit of answers to these questions, these studies identify contemporary challenges to the existence of the boundary line when culture, history, governance, market and migration flows, security or sustainability policies straddle the boundary line. Each panel will present research data and research findings published on the BIG website paper series and thus available online for the purpose of the ABS World Conference 2018.

The BIG-panels will take place in Paper Room (Rudolfi), July 13th, at 09:00 am, 10:45 am, and 2:50 pm.
Central European Service for Cross-Border Initiatives

Many people live their everyday lives with a knowledge about the proximity of the border, along with all the difficulties originating from this situation. CESCI was founded in 2009 with the aim to make their lives easier by enhancing the permeability of borders and by removing barriers created by them.

By applying the latest scientific results, CESCI creates cross-border strategic plans and programmes which serve as basis for concrete sustainable developments. It is CESCI’s mission to play a certain intermediary role between local, national and EU level institutions in order to adopt provisions at upper levels which are comprehensible also at a local level and are to the interests of local people.

CESCI aims to create as many relations as possible between people living on each side of the border, to help remove the barriers hindering cooperation in order to not only make everyday life easier but also contribute to bring a mutual understanding and rapprochement among the people living in Central Europe.

The posters will be on display in Vienna, July 10th to 11th.

Art Exhibition: Texas Borderlands: The Visual Iconography of Mestiza Resistance and Survival

Santa C. Barraza, artist and professor from Texas A&M University at Kingsville, paints from her experience living at the cross roads of the Texas borderlands, a “Nepantla,” an in-between-ness, experience. The Nahuatl word “Nepantla” derives from the mythic “land between” where a collision of two opposing worlds collide and re-contextualize to form a third world as an emergence of a hybrid culture and language. Her art reflects this space of living in between, such as the borderlands. She reclaims and appropriates from opposing cultures, both ancient and contemporary and creates a mestiza (hybrid) iconographic visual expression. The appropriation of the ancient culture of the Mesoamerican becomes re-contextualized into a new format of a mestiza visual language of the borderlands. The artwork manifests itself into an exploration of history, emotion and spirit of the land and human experience of resistance and survival of living between Mexico and Texas.

The exhibition is on display in Vienna, July 10th to 11th.

Film Screenings:

The Wall [El Muro]
Organiser: Resendiz, Rosalva (University of Texas-Río Grande Valley)/Resendiz, Ramon (New York University Steinhardt School of Education & Human Development)

60 minutes; USA/Mexico; directed and produced by Ramon and Rosalva Resendiz

The documentary foregrounds Elisa Tamez’s resistance against the U.S. government’s building of the border wall/fence across her ancestral lands on the Texas/Mexico border. This project operationalises a decolonising framework of production inspired by Linda Tuhiwai Smith. The film focuses on the continued violations against the indigenous Mestizas, Mexican Americans and their land.

Scheduled for Room 101 (Budapest), July 13th, 8:00 am

Inner Mapping
Organiser: Latte-Abdallah, Stéphanie (Centre national de la recherche scientifique, Paris)

51 minutes; English subtitles; Palestine/ France; directed by Stéphanie Latte Abdallah and Emad Ahmad; produced by Emad Ahmad-Studio 5 Audio Visual Production/CNRS Images

The movie tests the territorial limits of the Israeli occupation in the West Bank. Depending on who you are, the car you are driving, your circulations are separate, parallel. The country becomes the network of roads and paths that you can take. The guide of this strange road movie, the Palestinian GPS, is concrete, technological, graphic. Banal, global, it is cornered by a context of exception. Driving with the GPS is living an absurd map. Each of us, of the people we meet, are his or her own border. We are looking inside the car with the camera of the director of photography, but also continuously, outside, with three GoPro cameras installed on the car. Doing so, we are filming the fracture between the territory of a lost continuity, that of a dreamed and political Palestine, and daily Palestine: The West Bank of possible movements, of the GPS, cut into two maps, Israeli and Palestinian.

Scheduled for Room 313 (Budapest), July 14th, 10:45 am

Strangers at Home
Organiser: Plaut, Shayna (University of Winnipeg)

In Europe, waves of migrants have renewed feelings of resentment towards people perceived as “outsiders”. Political and economic uncertainty has led some politicians to search for scapegoats in traditionally ostracised communities. Extremist voices are gaining political power, driving some Europeans to take to the streets to “claim back” their place in Europe as well as fending resistance to this trend. As a result, millions of people in Europe are feeling like strangers at home. Strangers at Home is a nine-segment “anthology documentary” with nine different stories in nine different countries. By working with a multiplicity of storytellers across different geographical, social, political and professional locations, it challenges the simplified narrative and embraces the complexity and nuance of stranger and home. Strangers at Home has won numerous awards and has been screened at the United Nations and Council of Europe as well as numerous university campuses across Canada and the United States.

Scheduled for lecture hall 18 (Vienna), July 11th, 8:45 am

Technical Support

Volunteers will be present in Vienna and Budapest to ensure that every participant receives the appropriate support.

Vienna

In the conference rooms, you will find information on how to use the technical equipment and on whom to contact in case of needs. Student volunteers from Dr. MaechtelVenken’s class “Individuum und Entwicklung” will assist you in setting up your presentation if necessary. All conference rooms are equipped with computers. Please bring your PowerPoint Presentations with you on a flash drive and upload your presentations on the computer in the conference room before your speech. Please do not use your own computer.

CEU: Classroom quick start guide

General Audiovisual information:
- In a regular classroom, there are two interactive wall mounted LED displays. Both are equipped with a built-in computer with Windows. Any of the two screens can be used as a digital whiteboard, or as a display for presentation.
- Built-in speakers are in the ceiling and connected to all sources.
- There is a technical cabinet in the classroom, where you can find a phone to place internal calls, VGA cable, an HDMI cable and ClickShare USB buttons (for accessing the board via WiFi).
- Floor boxes are available to charge electronic devices. If you need more electric power distribution cables, please contact the Classroom Support unit at the extension 666.

Note:
- Laser pointer does not work on the smartboard/LCD panel. If you wish to use a pointer, please use the wireless keyboard’s touchpad, as a mouse. The keyboard is available in the classroom.
- Currently it is not possible to present from mobile devices (tablets, smartphones).
- You may want to consider saving your presentation on a pendrive or in a cloud-based account of yours and access it through the smartboard or the presentation laptop.

What do you want to do?

1. Presentation from my laptop/Macbook (If you wish to present a video, skip this point and go to point 2 for instructions on how to set up your laptop)
   1. Start your laptop.
   2. Press “Left wifi” button on the black panel next to the digital board.
   3. Open the cabinet in the classroom and take out a ClickShare USB button. After your laptop started up insert this USB button in your laptop.
   4. A File Manager window will open where you will need to double-click the “Clickshare for Windows.exe” file. Note: if you have a Macbook, you need to double-click the "Clickshare for MacOSX.app". The ClickShare button is being installed now. When it is complete, the following test will appear in the right bottom section of the laptop's screen: "Ready to share on your classroom number".
   5. After the ClickShare button stops blinking, press the top of the button so it lights up red. Your laptop screen will appear on the board, and you can start your presentation.
   6. If you want to disconnect your laptop from the board, press the top of the ClickShare button again.

2. Video screening from my laptop/Macbook
   1. Start your laptop.
   2. Press “Left HDMI” button on the black panel next to the digital board.
   3. Open the cabinet in the classroom and take out an HDMI cable. After your laptop started up insert one end of this cable on your laptop and the other end in the HDMI slot in the floor box closest to the cabinet.
4. Your laptop screen will appear on the board, and you can start your presentation.
5. If your laptop does not have an HDMI slot, it surely has a VGA slot. In this case, use a VGA cable instead of the HDMI (also available in the cabinet) and make sure you set the "Left VGA" option on the black panel.

3. Presentation/Video screening on the wall
1. Press "Left PC" button on the black panel next to the digital board.
2. When the board started up, insert your pen drive in the USB slot on the side of the board. You can find your pen drive in the File Manager, just like when you use it in your computer.
3. Do not forget to remove your pen drive after the presentation is over!

4. Use the board as a (a) PC or as a (b) whiteboard

a) Use it as a PC
1. Press "Left PC" button on the black panel next to the digital board.
2. When the board started up, you can see a screen similar to your computer’s screen.
3. When the board is set, take the black stylus pen (Attached to the side of the board magnetically. If you cannot find it, dial the Classroom Support unit at extension 6000).
4. If you want to use a web browser, touch the Chrome icon with the stylus pen at the bottom of the screen.
5. If you wish to access a file from your Dropbox, Google drive, iCloud, etc. account, you can access these websites through the Chrome icon.

b) Use it as a Whiteboard
1. Press "Left PC" button on the black panel next to the digital board.
2. When the board started up, you can see a screen similar to your computer’s screen.
3. When the board is set, take the black stylus pen (Attached to the side of the board magnetically. If you cannot find it, dial the Classroom Support unit at extension 6000).
4. Touch the icon of the Whiteboard application at the bottom of the screen.
5. After the application started, you can start using it. The most important features are as follows:

- Move the page manually
- Eraser – choose the size
- Select any object (writing, shape, etc.)
- Shapes – insert basic shapes on the screen
- Pen – choose the thickness and color
- Camera – make screenshots of the...
- Typing text – Select this to switch to typed text. Use the wireless keyboard to type.
- Highlight – choose the thickness and color
- Selected objects
- Entire Whiteboard content
- Whole smartboard screen

6. You can save the content of the whiteboard by clicking on the “File” menu. Select the “Export” option in order to save it to a PDF or picture format. (Note: Do not use the “Save” option for saving, as it saves the content of the Whiteboard in a special format, which is inaccessible from a computer.)

7. Make sure you export your work to "Documents" and afterwards you can upload it to one of your cloud-based accounts (Google Drive, iCloud, Dropbox, etc.) or send it to any recipient.

5. Use both digital boards simultaneously
You can use both boards simultaneously:
- Use the left board for presentations from your laptop/Macbook and the right board as a whiteboard.

In this case make sure you set the appropriate option for both the left and right boards on the black panel.

For further instructions please check the relevant points (3 or 2 or 3 for presentation, and 4th for the whiteboard function).

6. I want students to show their presentations from their own laptops
1. Start the relevant laptops.
2. Press "Left PC" button on the black panel next to the digital board.
3. Open the cabinet in the classroom and take out as many ClickShare USB buttons as needed (up to 4). After the laptops started up, insert these USB buttons in the laptops. Each laptop will install this device.
4. When the install is done (the button stops blinking), press the top of the button so it lights. The laptop screen will appear on the board, and the presentation can start.
5. If multiple buttons (up to 4) are on at the same time, then the screen of the board will be split and each laptop’s screen will appear on the board.
6. If one wants to disconnect his/her laptop from the board, the top of the ClickShare button should be pressed again and the screen of that laptop will disappear from the board. The ClickShare button can then be passed on to another participant who can connect his/her laptop to the board, as described above.

7. I want to prevent from my tablet/iPad
Unfortunately, this feature is not yet available. You may want to consider saving your presentation in a cloud-based storage space (Dropbox, Google Drive, iCloud), which you can access through the board. (See point 4th).
The Juridicum is located within a short walking distance of the Main Building of the University of Vienna, within a pedestrian zone. It is easily reached by public transport. Bus line 1A stops right in front of the main building. Tram lines 1, 37, 38, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 71, and D depart from there. In the map on the next page, the Juridicum is indicated in black.

The city hall is in walking distance to the Juridicum, right next to metro station Rathaus (U2, purple). Tram lines 1, 37, 71, and D depart right in front of it at the station Rathausplatz/Burgtheater. Nightline buses N25, N38, N60 depart nearby by the tram station.
Central European University Budapest
Conference Venue in Budapest
Budapest, Nádor u. 9, 1051 Hungary

Central European University (CEU), located in the heart of Budapest, within steps of the St. Istvan Basilica, the Parliament and the Danube, is a premier destination for conferences and events. The buildings include a large Auditorium, meeting rooms for 5 to 80 guests, a rooftop terrace and catering venues. CEU’s buildings at Nador utca 13 and 15 opened in fall 2016 with the highest standards in both design and environmental sustainability.

The conference will take place in three CEU buildings located in Nádor utca 9-15. To enter the rooms in N15 and N13, please enter through the entrance to Nádor 15. Auditorium A and B are located in the basement next to the main entrance, whereas the rooms 101, 106 and 202 are on the first and second floor, respectively. To enter N13 building, please enter N15 entrance and then turn right.

Gellner Room (103) and Popper Room (102) are located in Nador 9 Monument Building, which can be entered through the main entrance to Nádor 9, at the corner to Zrinyi utca (the pedestrian zone with a view of the Basilica). Follow the main stairs, turn right, enter the round hallway and then proceed left to Gellner and Popper rooms.
